

5 Unexpected Ways to Control Supply Chain Costs

If you're under a mandate to cut supply chain costs in the next year, find out how innovative companies are harnessing groundbreaking technology to root-out hidden cost pressures on their budgets. Discover how five companies are taking control of their supply chain costs with visibility tools, helping them lead their supply chains through the unexpected.

Take full control of inventory across your supply chain

With the FourKites tool you can compare what the planned lead time is for your inventory to the actual lead time, and when you put those two things together, you can see where there's waste. Looking at the actual lead time with confidence is critical to driving lower inventory and improving cash flow.”

Keep your teams focused on your mission, not your misses

“

It used to be a lot of manual tracking. We were asking carriers for updates over email or calling them over the phone or checking websites... so many different avenues. With FourKites it's all in one place. It's just a lot easier to use. We even have our dealer management system updated to include direct links to the FourKites tracking, so it's just a click away for our dealers and our customers.”

Stop giving providers free money, while becoming a shipper of choice

To make the most of your time, you need to be able to parse through the vast amounts of data you're getting on a day-to-day basis and focus on what you really need to. FourKites allows you to manage by exception, rather than having to go through piece by piece of everything.”
